

SPDE simulation on spheres

Annika Lang (Chalmers & University of Gothenburg), Peter Creasey

The simulation of solutions to stochastic partial differential equations requires besides discretization in space and time the approximation of the driving noise. This problem can be transferred to the simulation of a sequence of random fields on the underlying domain. In this talk I will concentrate on domains that are spheres and review some recent developments.